Why is my government set on money over environment. We are killing our planet due to greed of a few. My government IS NOT REPRESENTING THE PEOPLE NOR CONCERNED WITH THEIR HELATH AND WELFARE. WHAT HAS HAPPENED TO OUR DEMOCRACY IT HAS BEEN BURIED UNDER CORPORATE GREED. How do those who conquer and kill our earth live with themselves, it is a sad commentary on humanity. If the scientist say we need to leave 90% of the coal in the ground due to climate change, we should do it. Or at least charge the companies so much that they find it not worth their effort. We could then use that money to fund clean energy. Giving publicly owned coal to private companies is incompatible with President Obama's stated commitment to stop runaway climate change. RE: (RIN) 1012-AA13, Consolidated Federal Oil and Gas and Federal and Indian Coal Valuation Reform

Selling a public resource at prices far below market value amounts to permitting private companies to steal from US citizens. Doing this with fossil fuels amounts to permitting private companies to benefit at the expense of every citizen who is negatively impacted by climate change. International sales of US energy resources just contributes to our long-term energy insecurity. It is also incompatible with President Obama's stated commitment to slow down climate change. Pick a reason - but all of them point to the need to end the federal coal leasing program. As a public servant, you have an obligation to serve the greater good; accordingly, please do everything in your power to keep publicly owned coal in the ground.

RE: (RIN) 1012-AA13, Consolidated Federal Oil and Gas and Federal and Indian Coal Valuation Reform

Giving publicly owned coal to private companies is incompatible with President Obama's stated commitment to stop runaway climate change. You must end the federal coal leasing program and do everything in your power to keep publicly owned coal in the ground. If you are going to continue permitting private exploitation of these resources, at the very least there need to be extremely strong and unavoidable controls upon the environmental effects of both mining and the use of the coal (coal is far too valuable a resource to BURN!) Additionally, such leases MUST provide the government with a fair market value for the resource--we are no longer in a situation which requires us to provide it to private industry without extracting a fair profit on the resource for the country. Of course, ALL hydrocarbons are too valuable to merely burn as fuel! And we deserve a fair price for all of them sold too! Lease operators for all US resource leases must be held accountable for their environmental and operational quality--with operators unable to comply having their leases revoked (all) and being prohibited from purchasing or operating any leases in the future. This would include both corporate and all natural people involved in the operations. It's long past time to remove scowflaws from their ability to exploit public resources for private profit, without the public profiting or while dumping clean-up costs on the public. BP says they "can't afford" to clean up their spill in the Gulf. Fine. Then the company should have all of it's leases revoked, and be dismembered and sold to cover the costs of remediation of their damages. Break them up and sell them off to pay their bills--just as any other bankrupt company. Additionally, we should go and reclaim all profits issued to shareholders since the accident, as that money rightfully should be applied to their debts. We know who go the money, and it was illicitly paid, so subject to seizure. Shareholders are not protected from illegal acts.

RE: (RIN) 1012-AA13, Consolidated Federal Oil and Gas and Federal and Indian Coal Valuation Reform

Coal is best left in the ground until better ways of extraction and burning are devised. Right now the price for coal is incredibly cheap in money but incredibly expensive for the damage it will do. We have coal trains running through my town every day, going to Canada to sell the coal cheaply to China. Is this really what we want to be? A nation that sells our precious resources cheaply (stealing from our people)? All for a few dollars unfairly distributed so that the winds will blow back the pollution laden with Mercury to poison our seas? Stop this nonsense now! Giving publicly owned coal to private companies is incompatible with President Obama's stated commitment to stop runaway climate change. You must end the federal coal leasing program and do everything in your power to keep publicly owned coal in the ground.

RE: (RIN) 1012-AA13, Consolidated Federal Oil and Gas and Federal and Indian Coal Valuation Reform

Giving publicly owned coal to private companies is incompatible with President Obama's stated commitment to stop runaway climate change. You must end the federal coal leasing program and do everything in your power to keep publicly owned coal in the ground. We must be committed to clean energy sources from now on. This is the path to a better future. We only have one earth.

RE: (RIN) 1012-AA13, Consolidated Federal Oil and Gas and Federal and Indian Coal Valuation Reform

Honestly, I am surprised..... Selling coal abroad is a poor solution and idea, is archaic in nature and needs to change. If we want to help other countries develop economically and with energy needs, we need to do it the right way - with solar and wind assistance and knowledge, etc.. Not fleecing the Earth further, adding to climate change dramatically and continuing unethical environmental, humanitarian, economical and societal practices. It's not fair to the recipients and individuals who will receive and use the coal, because it is only harming them. Obviously it adds greatly to carbon emissions output, which is in the billion tonnage yearly. Yes, billions, and this is a confirmed, reliable statistic. Approximately 750 billion tons per year actually is produced globally. Is there no conscience here? Pretending it doesn't matter, or that it is their choice to buy it, does not make this problem or issue go away. Selling coal is a poor intention. Perhaps it was viable 30, 40 years ago or acceptable for a short period of time, before other technologies and understanding of energy dynamics and consequences had been developed - but certainly not now, in 2015. We are a modern world, and this is a very old, destructive practice in place. And now it is simply changing its face, metamorphosing, and altering its form. It's subversive in nature, not congruent with the future, or streamlined with a positive world vision. What happens in other countries throughout the world, greatly affects us here in America as well. We are all interconnected. The greatest example of this is integrated weather patterns that span the Earth, and there are many other countless examples of interconnectivity, taking places in a myriad of channels and ways, in life, the environment, and in all places and all things. This is a beautiful part of the Universe, God, the miracle of life, and our Earth. Therefore, it is unacceptable, and not an ethical practice. This is indeed, another "hot", highly lucrative, short term profit making venture and movement - with continued serious, deeper long term effects. It all comes out in the wash somewhere, and in the end, unfortunately, so will dirty coal. Our country's involvement in the future should be greatly reduced with coal, and oil and gasoline. We should minimize our use, interest and appetite for it, and start looking for energy elsewhere. Coal, oil, etc. are natural resources and elements, there is a limit to them - and one day the proverbial "well" will dry out. So this door will eventually either close for us now, or years later, depending on policy, or eventually mother nature.... I propose a 1 or 2 year limit on this practice, before it is cut off, dramatically reduced, or eliminated all together through stricter policy. This allows a short window of profit allowed, balanced with the necessary regulation for the future, in order to protect the environment, make a statement towards energy use and stop the practice, before it becomes much more inflated and extensive. Natural Gas was a hot, new and upcoming energy resource and idea, and look where that has led - to some very bad places. Selling coal Federally is no different. If we want to sell something and make a profit from energy, let our country sell biofuel, solar or wind power units. At least we can sleep at night.... Please make the shift and change now, begin the process immediately, or asap. And have a plan in store instead to sell solar and wind units for reduced or wholesale prices abroad in the future. This kills two birds, with one stone. Giving publicly owned coal to private companies is also not compatible with President Obama's stated commitment to stop runaway climate change. Please end the federal coal leasing program, and do everything in your power to keep publicly owned coal in the ground. In the long run, this is a better, safer, healthier policy. Eventually that decision will have to be made, either now or later. Thank you, I appreciate your concern and taking my comments into greater consideration. It is very appreciated.

With the real threat of climate change activating feedback loops we will have no control over, I urge you to take the most aggressive pricing policy possible for publicly owned coal. Drive the price up to make coal less competitive with cleaner energy sources. Not only will this help the emerging clean energy movement, but an aggressive pricing policy will also raise much needed federal revenue in a time of massive deficits and budget shortfalls.

RE: (RIN) 1012-AA13, Consolidated Federal Oil and Gas and Federal and Indian Coal Valuation Reform

"SAFE ENERGY GENERATION" that can use up existing nuclear waste ! Thorium, the Biggest Energy Breakthrough Since Fire! So Why don't we hear more about it; because existing energy companies and big fossil fuel doesn't want you to! Thorium, a naturally-occurring, slightly radioactive metal discovered in 1828 by the Swedish chemist Jons Jakob Berzelius, could provide the world with an ultra-safe, ultra-cheap source of nuclear power. A new advocacy organization, the Weinberg Foundation, which plans to push the promise of thorium nuclear energy into the mainstream political discussion of clean energy and climate change. The message they're sending is that thorium is the anti-dote to the world's most pressing energy and environmental challenges. So what is the big deal about thorium? In 2006, writing in the magazine Cosmos, Tim Dean summarized perhaps the most optimistic scenario for what a Thorium-powered nuclear world would be like: What if we could build a nuclear reactor that offered no possibility of a meltdown, generated its power inexpensively, created no weapons-grade by-products, and burnt up existing high-level waste as well as old nuclear weapon stockpiles? And what if the waste produced by such a reactor was radioactive for a mere few hundred years rather than tens of thousands? It may sound too good to be true, but such a reactor is indeed possible, and a number of teams around the world are now working to make it a reality. What makes this incredible reactor so different is its fuel source: thorium. A clutch of companies and countries are aggressively pursuing Dean's dream of a thorium-powered world. Lightbridge Corporation, a pioneering nuclear-energy start-up company based in McLean, VA, is developing the Radkowsky Thorium Reactor in collaboration with Russian researchers. In 2009, Areva, the French nuclear engineering conglomerate, recruited Lightbridge for a project assessing the use of thorium fuel in Areva's next-generation EPR reactor, advanced class of 1,600+ MW nuclear reactors being built in Olkiluoto, Finland and Flamanville, France. In China, the Atomic Energy of Canada Limited and a clutch of Chinese outfits began an effort in mid-2009 to use thorium as fuel in nuclear reactors in Qinshan, China. Thorium is more abundant than uranium in the Earth's crust. The world has an estimated 4.4 million tons of total known and estimated Thorium resources, according to the International Atomic Energy Association's 2007 Red Book. The most common source of thorium is the rare earth phosphate mineral, monazite. World monazite resources are estimated to be about 12 million tons, two-thirds of which are in India. Idaho also boasts a large vein deposit of thorium and rare earth metals. Thorium can be used as a nuclear fuel through breeding to fissile uranium-233.

RE: (RIN) 1012-AA13, Consolidated Federal Oil and Gas and Federal and Indian Coal Valuation Reform

Well, I guess it's time to re-do Mount Rushmore, blasting away the faces of Washington, Jefferson, Roosevelt, and Lincoln, replacing them with the faces of the Koch brothers and Don Blankenship. Clearly U.S. energy policy is driven, not by what's best for the people, the country, or the planet, but by what's best for the fossil fuel industry. Giving publicly owned coal to private companies is incompatible with President Obama's stated commitment to stop runaway climate change. You must end the federal coal leasing program and do everything in your power to keep publicly owned coal in the ground.

Sincerely,

RE: (RIN) 1012-AA13, Consolidated Federal Oil and Gas and Federal and Indian Coal Valuation Reform

As an organic geochemist, I recognize the importance of continued coal extraction as we transition to renewable energy sources. However, expanding and subsidizing the extraction of coal only encourages its unnecessary use and delays badly needed action on climate change. Giving publicly owned coal to private companies is incompatible with President Obama's stated commitment to stop runaway climate change. You must end the federal coal leasing program and do everything in your power to keep publicly owned coal in the ground.

RE: (RIN) 1012-AA13, Consolidated Federal Oil and Gas and Federal and Indian Coal Valuation Reform

THERE IS NO SUCH THING AS "CLEAN COAL", let alone any fossil fuel (or Nuke). We, the U.S., should be promoting cleaner, renewable forms of energy! We should be global leaders. We have the technology, but lack the insight and support to make it happen in a timely manner. We should no longer be using dirty and dangerous fossil fuels and/or nukes. No form of energy use is perfect, but there are certain forms that are much less damaging. If the govt had supported these forms as they have funded fossil fuels and nukes for the past one or two decades, we would be in a much better position on Earth today! No one cried for wagon makers when the car replaced wagons. The economy will right itself - we need to give it that chance! We, the U.S., should be promoting cleaner, renewable forms of energy! RE: (RIN) 1012-AA13, Consolidated Federal Oil and Gas and Federal and Indian Coal Valuation Reform

Giving publicly owned coal to private companies is incompatible with President Obama's stated commitment to stop runaway climate change. You must end the federal coal leasing program and do everything in your power to keep publicly owned coal in the ground. This is apparently the only forum for individuals to state their desires. As the politicians say one thing and do another, we need to hold their feet to the dirty coal fire.

Sincerely,

RE: (RIN) 1012-AA13, Consolidated Federal Oil and Gas and Federal and Indian Coal Valuation Reform

This administration cannot be taken seriously about wanting to combat climate change when our government continues to give away publicly owned coal to private coal companies to sell to Asia for a profit. This is exactly the opposite of combatting climate change. Increased fuel efficiency for cars is a good thing, as well as some of the other measures this administration has managed to take, but that coal needs to stay in the ground.

RE: (RIN) 1012-AA13, Consolidated Federal Oil and Gas and Federal and Indian Coal Valuation Reform

I am very concerned about coal burning and what it adds to climate change. And my family all has asthma, and coal makes our air difficult to breathe. According to a shocking new study published in the journal Nature, we must leave at least 90 percent of remaining U.S. coal reserves in the ground to have just a 50-50 chance of stopping runaway climate change.¹ Giving publicly owned coal to private companies is incompatible with President Obama's stated commitment to stop runaway climate change. You must end the federal coal leasing program and do everything in your power to keep publicly owned coal in the ground. 1. RE: (RIN) 1012-AA13, Consolidated Federal Oil and Gas and Federal and Indian Coal Valuation Reform

Coal is dirty. Coal is the dirtiest form of energy. When I moved to Santa Fe, New Mexico in 1982, I could see 60 miles to the Jemez mountains as clearly as I could see the mountains a mile from my home EVERY DAY! Today, because of the Four Corners coal plants, that only happens a few times a year after heavy rains. So stop encouraging coal use by allowing coal companies to dig on public lands. At the very least, charge them market rates plus to deter coal use and ease the tax burden on the 99%.

RE: (RIN) 1012-AA13, Consolidated Federal Oil and Gas and Federal and Indian Coal Valuation Reform

If the American public is the true owner of federal lands, then the Department of the Interior should not be selling or leasing the right to extract coal from these lands to any individuals, much less to corporations and private for-profit companies. Unless we keep American coal in the ground, we are disastrously contributing to carbon pollution and unprecedented climate change. It is an established fact that the ice in the Arctic is melting at an exponential rate. This melted ice becomes water expanding the oceans, and evaporates into the atmosphere, only to return later as hurricanes, tornadoes, excessive snow and other major storm systems. If our coastal cities and towns are drowned by warming seas, what good will the sold coal do for the people who are affected by that? I urge you to consider suspending and terminating leases to extract coal from public lands. If third world countries need energy to improve their economic welfare, why don't we start with solar and wind power for those nations, rather than the obsolete energy sources of the 19th century?
